Chicago Firebug Blamed for Seven Deaths

TORCH SET TO FRONT AND REAR OF APARTMENTS

Scores Of Children And Women Sealed Inside Burning Building
60 SAVED BY FIREMEN
Six Extinguishers Missing From Regular Niches In Structure

CHICAGO, Nov. 20—A city-wide hunt for a cold-blooded firebug was launched today as a three-way investigation began into a $30,000 fire which killed seven persons, five of them women, in the three story Lille apartments on Chicago's south side.

The fire broke out simultaneously in the front and rear of the building, sealing scores of tenants, most of them women and children, behind walls of smoke and flame.

More than 60 of the tenants were rescued by the firemen and carried them from flame-licked windows to safety. One man saved his 22-month-old son by bridging a distance of 15 feet over firemen set ladders up to his apartment window.

Aside from the fact that fires sprang up simultaneously at the front and rear of the building, major evidence pointing to deliberate incendiary was the reported absence of six fire extinguishers from their niches on the three floors of the building.

According to at least one survivor, they had been in their places a few hours before the fatal blaze swept the building last midnight.

Plunges To Death

One of the dead was a woman who was fatally injured when she plunged from a second story window as flame and smoke cut off all exits.

The charred bodies of the others were found in their apartments.

The dead:

Peter Koteras and his wife, Anne, both 50. They were found in their beds on the top floor.

Anne Schaeffer, 35.

Dora Rosenberg, 45, paralytic, found burned to death in her apartment.

A man and a woman tentatively identified as Miss Jessie Poland, 40, and Edgar McCool, 40, and another Miss Poland, whose first name was not learned immediately.

Discoverer Flames

The fire first was detected by Harold Tidmarsh, 31, and Errol Melton while in the former's third floor apartment. Smelling smoke, they both raced out for extinguishers, two of which normally are on each floor.

Finding none, they returned to the apartment and got Betty, Tidmarsh's wife, out to the street.

MURRAY BLASTS CONGRESS, WLB

CIO President Demands Change In Board Policy Or Personnel

CHICAGO, Nov. 20—President Philip Murray called today for a complete change in either the policy or the personnel of the War Labor Board in his report to the seventh annual constitutional convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations in Chicago.

The CIO president was equally bitter toward the waning 78th congress of which he said:

"The majority of the 78th congress had no desire to achieve an equitable stabilization program. Congress itself was concerned much less with the unparalleled production record than certain temporary shortages of materials."

"Such reports were the signal for attempts to shackle labor by variations of national service legislation."

Murray's report demanded wage rate increases at once and accused the War Labor Board of blocking wage hikes under the "Little Steel" formula.

He charged the WLB with procrastination in unfreezing wages and expressed his displeasure at its delay in meeting CIO demands.

Notwithstanding his complaints of allegedly unfair treatment at the hands of the administration, he reaffirmed the CIO's "no-strike" pledge, saying:

"Until we have accomplished the complete and absolute destruction of the German and Japanese military forces, there can be no question of our basic responsibility to the nation to continue intact our 'no strike' pledge."

"This is a responsibility which labor has to the nation and to itself."

"For this reason, it is imperative that there be a National War Labor Board to handle, not some, but all disputes that may arise between labor and management and (Continued on Page Two)

Vinson Stand Indicates No General Wage Hoist Before Germany Falls

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—A vigorous reaffirmation of the administration's "hold-the-line" anti-inflation policy was believed today to preclude any general wage increases for labor until V-E Day.

Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson reaffirmed the "hold-the-line" program on the heels of a report by a presidential committee that the wartime cost of living has risen 29 to 30 percent.

The first public post-election pronouncement by a top administration official on the price-wage question came as the CIO and AFL opened their annual conventions in Chicago and New Orleans on a keynote for higher wages.

Both organizations resolved to renew with greater emphasis their demands that the "Little Steel" wage freeze be revised upward.

Vinson's statement, however, commended the report of War Labor Board Chairman William H. Davis as "confirmation of the general belief that a good job has been done in stabilizing wartime prices and living costs."

"We cannot afford to relax our efforts," he said. "So long as the war absorbs half of our national production, we must hold prices at their present level in order to preserve the purchasing power of the worker's pay envelope."

"I am frankly disturbed to note that, after a year of complete stability, the cost of living has risen slightly, but perceptibly during the past six months. This must stop. The price administrator and I will use special vigilance to this end."

George Meany, AFL secretary-treasurer, called, however, for a change in the "Little Steel" yardstick to permit wage increases of 30 percent above January, 1941, in line with Davis' cost-of-living figure. The formula limits them to 15 percent.

R. J. Thomas, CIO member of the special cost-of-living committee, rejected Davis' finding and insisted the cost of living has risen 44 percent.

Vinson's statement strengthened previous reports that the administration (Continued on Page Two)

MARINES EVEN PLAY ROUGH, CHICAGO LEARNS

CHICAGO, Nov. 20—A small area in uptown Chicago counted its casualties today following a mighty realistic "invasion" of the Foster avenue "beachhead" by some 200 Marines in simulation of the attacks at Guadalcanal, Tarawa, Guam and Saipan.

For one thing, the concussions from successive explosions shattered 20 windows in the fashionable Edgewater Beach hotel where Gov. Dwight H. Green and State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney have suites.

For another, two of the Leathernecks were slightly wounded when dynamite charges used to simulate land mines were exploded. The victims were given first aid on the beach by Navy hospital corpsmen and removed by ambulance to a hospital.

The invasion, employing amphibious tanks, landing boats, dive bombers, fighting planes, flame throwers and everything, ushered in the 6th War Loan drive in the Chicago area. More than 100,000 witnessed the spectacle.

SUICIDE PLANES SINK U. S. SHIPS, TOKYO CLAIMS

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Japanese imperial headquarters claimed today that Jap "special-attack" suicide planes sank three Allied transports Saturday and "damaged and set ablaze" four others in Leyte Gulf in the Philippines.

According to the Jap assertion, heard by the FCC, the three transports, said to be each of 10,000 tons, were sunk in "bodily" crashes by the suicide corps.

Another Jap claim said that similar planes set an aircraft carrier and warship ablaze and sank two cruisers east of the Philippines.

None of the Jap propaganda stories has been substantiated by any official Allied source.

MRS. CATT WINS '44 AWARD FOR WORK IN 1920

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, 85-year-old suffragist and peace crusader, today held the American Woman's Association's achievement award for 1944 for leadership she contributed twenty-four years ago in the drive to give women the right to vote.

Accepting the award, Mrs. Catt admonished more than 700 representatives of business and professional clubs to "help make yours a lasting peace that will never be broken by another brutal war."

Goal Call For Sales Of Five Billion Dollars To Individuals

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—The nation's Sixth War Loan Drive—highlighted by unprecedented steps to boost sales—opened officially today as six million volunteer salesmen combed the United States from coast to coast to sell 14 billion dollars worth of war bonds by Dec. 16.

The drive's goal calls for sale of five billion dollars in bonds to individuals, while treasury Secretary Morgenthau urged the 27 million Americans on payrolls to buy "an extra" $100 bond during the Nov. 20 to Dec. 16 period.

President Roosevelt keynoted the campaign last night with a radio appeal to the home front for wholehearted support of the nation's fighting forces.

ARMY DESERTERS AGAIN HEADED TOWARD PRISON

Two Army deserters Monday were again headed for prison, their freedom cut short by their capture here last Friday by six Pickaway county farmers.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff announced Monday that the two men captured here last week after they eluded highway patrolmen, police and the sheriff, had admitted they were Army deserters and had been turned over to military authorities.

Both gave fictitious names when they were jailed here, Sheriff Radcliff said. The younger of the pair who said his name was Tony Nardozie, 17, was Tony Demino, 19, while the other who gave the name of Jack Robbins was Joseph H. Flaherty, 22, the sheriff said. Both admitted escaping from Fort Knox, Ky., where they were being held until they could be sent to federal penitentiaries.

Sheriff Radcliff said Demino had been sentenced to 25 years in a federal institution. Flaherty had been sentenced to 15 years in the federal reformatory at Chillicothe.

They were among the six men who escaped last week from Fort Knox. They told the sheriff they "thumbed" a ride to Cincinnati where they stole the car in which they were fleeing when they trail led officers in a chase across the country but were captured in Salt-creek township Friday morning.

The fugitives were taken to Fort Hayes in Columbus.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20—The cigarette shortage which heretofore has occasioned only minor quarrels and a few fist-fights, principally between clerks and would-be customers, reached the killing stage today.

MacArthur Declares Enemy Losses In Leyte Fighting Now Total 45,000

GEN. MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, PHILIPPINES, Nov. 20 — Disclosure that American troops have landed in one more group of Southwest Pacific islands off the northern tip of Dutch New Guinea was made by Gen. Douglas MacArthur today.

"We have landed troops on the Asia Islands, 130 miles north of Sorong," a communique from MacArthur's headquarters said.

Sorong is on the extreme western tip of Dutch New Guinea, and the Asia, a small clump of several islands lie due northwards. They are midway between the Mapia group and Halmahera.

The occupation was made presumably to deprive the Japs of another aerial spotting station on the air route over which Allied bombers fly from their New Guinea bases to raid Jap positions throughout the Southwest Pacific.

Mapia Occupied

At the same time, MacArthur's headquarters announced that Yankee assault troops had "completed occupation of the entire Mapia group of islands."

The Mapias group is about the same distance north of Geelvink bay as the Asias are from Sorong and also was used by the Japs for spotting purposes.

Meanwhile, as the hard hitting 24th, 96th, 7th and 32nd infantry units and the First Division cavalry tightened the screws on the trapped enemy in the Ormoc sector of Leyte island in the central Philippines, Gen. MacArthur announced that enemy losses so far in the bloody battle for the all important island have passed the 45,000 mark as against 5,691 American casualties.

1,133 Yanks Killed

A spokesman at headquarters said that 1,133 Americans have been killed, 4,432 have been wounded and 126 are missing, and added that the Japanese casualty figures did not include some 7,000 Jap troops lost aboard a convoy which several days ago when it attempted to enter Ormoc bay.

The Jap casualty figures, the spokesman said, did not include enemy naval personnel killed during earlier naval-convoys battles.

Despite the heavy casualties inflicted, the Japs continued to fight viciously to maintain their hold on Ormoc and Ormoc bay, lying on the northwest coast of Leyte.

The Yankees have clamped a block on the Ormoc road, cutting off reinforcements to the doomed Japs in Ormoc itself, while in the Limon sector of the same salient the Japs have attempted a number of furious counter attacks against the American troops, all of which were sharply repulsed in hand to hand combat.

A bird's eye view of the bloody battle would show elements of the 24th Infantry Division pressing down from the north of the island (Continued on Page Two)

Telephone Communications In Ohio Further Crippled As Walkout Spreads

CLEVELAND, Nov. 20—Long-distance telephone communications were further crippled throughout the state today as Youngstown became the twenty-fifth Ohio city to feel the effect of an operators strike against the Ohio Bell Telephone Company.

The Youngstown operators and plant workers walked out at 3:30 p. m. yesterday along with employees at Salem. Participating in the action were 325 operators and about 100 other employees.

Earlier, 1300 Cleveland operators struck and Saturday night 850 Cleveland maintenance men went on strike.

According to Earl Culp, editor of the monthly bulletin published by the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers, there are now approximately 4,000 operators, 1250 plant workers on strike. Culp said he expected maintenance workers, installation men and construction workers throughout northeastern Ohio to join in the work stoppage.

Meanwhile, both company and union officials said there was little hope for an early settlement of the dispute.

QUADS' MOTHER FINALLY GETS TO SEE BABIES

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20—Mrs. Kathleen Cirminello finally has seen her quadruplets—and she thinks they're cute.

In fact she thinks they "get cuter every day." It was disclosed at the Lying-In hospital in Philadelphia which announced the 30-year-old mother saw her quads last Thursday for the first time since their birth November 1.

The babies—Kathleen, Maureen, Eileen and Michael—now are breathing normally without extra oxygen. However, all are still living in incubators, with synthetic humidity and controlled heat.

"It's just God's mercy that anything so small could live," said Mrs. Cirminello. "I love them all and want to take them home as soon as possible."

Berlin Says American Army 200,000 Strong Paced By 1,000 Tanks

RELENTLESS MOVEMENT

3,000,000 Allies May Be Engaged In Furious Push To End War

BULLETIN

PARIS, Nov. 20—American Third Army Forces, won control of the entire fortress city of Metz this afternoon with the exception of isolated pockets of sniper fire and minor resistance from one Nazi held barracks.

Front line dispatches said the Yanks marched into Cathedral square and seized control of the city at 3 p. m. (10 a. m. EWT).

By International News Service

An ancient battlefield sacred to the cause and memory of French independence passed into the hands of a gallant army of modern France today.

Crack troops of the revitalized French empire, commanded by a veteran leader who escaped at Dunkerque, swarmed into the formidable fortress defenses of Belfort, historic route of conquest between France and Germany and reached the banks of the River Rhine.

A Berlin admission that American troops some 200,000 strong and supported by a vast rolling armada of more than 1,000 tanks have crashed halfway through the Siegfried line east of Aachen was overshadowed by official announcement that the French, with a justice fully as military as it was poetic, had been the first of all Allied units to spear their way through to Germany's main barrier and chief protection against assault.

Stand Guard on Rhine

"French soldiers," the Paris radio said with trenchant finality, "will stand guard upon the Rhine tonight."

German troops were reported clinging steadfastly to their last remaining garrisons at the Belfort Gap. But it was apparent that nothing would stop the Moroccan, Algerian and Senegalese troops pushing forward under command of Gen. Jean De Lattre De Tassigny, the aristocratic graduate of famed St. Cyr cavalry school who led some 50,000 defeated but high-spirited French soldiers out of Dunkerque and across the channel into England to rearm and fight another day.

Except for Verdun and its imperishable feats of arms in the last world war, there is no town in France more royally cloaked in military glory than Belfort.

Yet the French advance was merely one paragraph in the final chapter of defeat being meted out to Nazi Germany along a front of 450 miles—and written by six Allied armies which in all probabilities now number some three million men engaged in furious action along the greatest battlefield the world has ever seen.

Relentless Advance

From the flooded lowlands of Holland to the snow-tipped Alps of Switzerland the Allies pressed forward relentlessly.

The headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had little to report officially on advances of the United States First and Ninth armies which are gouging deep (Continued on Page Two)

MERCY PLANE CRASHES; 25 DIE AND 17 ESCAPE

LONDON, Nov. 20—A big Dakota transport plane, loaded with wounded from the Western front, believed to be mainly Americans and Poles, crashed last night in Southern England, but 17 passengers and most of the crew were rescued.

The total number aboard the plane was not immediately known, and the fate of the pilot, navigator and a nurse aboard remained unknown in early reports.

Additional details indicated that the death toll would total 25, mostly Americans.

Berlin Says American Army 200,000 Strong Paced By 1,000 Tanks

(Continued from Page One) But the Berlin radio's admission of a breakthrough half-way into Siegfried line defenses east of Aachen clearly indicated a continuing success for these American troops and the next few hours may disclose a definite thrust onto the plains of Cologne.

Never before since the war has Germany admitted the presence of a thousand allied tanks in the field at any one time. Broadcasts from Berlin gave incontrovertible evidence of Nazi fears that the final test of strength and courage has at last arrived.

Disaster For Huns

At this moment, gigantic Allied forces are at the thresholds of the Ruhr and Saar valleys, main-springs of the German war machine, chief dynamos of its industrial strength, seats of its synthetic oil, its steel, its iron, its lifeblood and its ammunition.

A sudden and welcome change in the weather enabled resumption of heavy air attack against enemy depots and communication lines, and towns and villages scooped up by the Allies in their advances were found wrecked and ruined by bomb assaults which tore German defenses to tatters and frayed the fighting nerves of beardless youths and baldheaded oldsters thrown into the line of action.

Many of these decrepit Nazi misfits were captured by the United States Third Army of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton Jr., which succeeded in surrounding the fortress city of Metz completely and then drove on eastward to a point only four miles from the Saar river.

One-third of Metz itself was taken and the city's fall was inevitable despite an apparent determination to defend it street by street. Virtually all of its historic forts were silenced and the Germans were reduced to sniper activity in cellars and on rooftops to delay the American advance.

Few changes were reported from the battlefronts in Eastern Europe, where Soviet armies under command of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky surged toward the Danube and the Hungarian capital of Budapest. Last reports placed the Russians only 15 miles from the city, with important German defense points overrun in swift succession.

In Italy, the Germans reacted with unexpected vigor to Allied advances, counterattacking with sufficient success to retake strategic Monte Fortino in the Forli area below Ravenna.

Japanese broadcasts told of new American air attacks on Tokyo's outlying strong-points in the Kurile islands, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced a new landing on the Asia islands off Dutch New Guinea and a tightening of the American grip on enemy troops hopelessly pocketed on Leyte islands in the Philippines.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme Allied commander in Western Europe, during the Army Hour broadcast earlier urged a "vastly oversubscribed" drive to aid the Allied armies in Europe in maintaining the tempo of their current offensive.

Meanwhile, newspapers, radio broadcasting chains, the motion picture and outdoor advertising industries have set up a program to push the Sixth Drive "as no previous war loan has ever been sold," according to Ted R. Gamble, national director of the treasury's war finance division.

In addition to support for the drive promised by the nation's newspapers, four radio networks, 16,920 motion picture theatres and 219,000 billboards throughout the country will devote their facilities to the raising of funds to further the war effort.

"The series E bond, selling for 25 percent less than its maturity value 10 years hence in denominations of $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000 is the chief concern of the six million workers in the drive," said Gamble.

Gamble said the farm population is expected to invest more than two billion dollars in the Sixth War Loan Drive in view of the record-breaking 1944 farm income of 21 billion dollars.

Treasury officials joined Gamble in asserting that "we will have to fight complacency of many over-optimistic persons who conclude from our successes in Europe and the Pacific that our two wars are almost won."

"That spirit is working for our enemies," Gamble said, "slowing our total war effort."

It was disclosed by the treasury that newspaper space valued at 23 million dollars was donated to the Fifth War Loan Drive by either newspapers or advertisers, and that space given the present drive in the week prior to its opening exceeded that in the same period in the last drive.

SHERIFF PROBES THREE MISHAPS OVER WEEKEND

Three accidents were investigated over the weekend by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Vern Pontious. Four persons were reported injured but none seriously, the officers said.

Saturday Sheriff Radcliff and highway patrolmen reported a Valley Public Service company bus and a truck loaded with hay and driven by Lloyd Flaughner, Grayson, Ky., collided at the junction of the Ashville and Lockbourne-Duval road. Both the bus and the truck went into a ditch after the truck struck the bus. Sheriff Radcliff said. One woman passenger on the bus was injured, the sheriff said. Both the bus and truck were damaged and hay was scattered over the road, the sheriff said.

Flaughner was fined $25 and costs by Squire Elmer Malone on charges of failure to yield the right of way, filed by Sheriff Radcliff and highway patrolmen.

Mrs. Mildred Bratchett, Neville Island, Pa., was treated for lacerations on her face and neck by Dr. W. F. Heine at Berger hospital early Sunday. She was injured when the car in which she was riding ran off the road on Route 159, two miles north of Route 56.

Ova Boggs and William Kitchen, both of Route 1, Hilliards, Ohio, were injured when their car crashed into an iron bridge on the Cromley road near Ashville Sunday at 4:15 p. m. Sheriff Radcliff reported. The sheriff said Boggs started into the bridge as a car driven by Lloyd Notestone, Adelphi, was coming out, and Boggs drove into the bridge to avoid hitting Notestone's car. The auto was demolished. Boggs complained of his chest and Kitchen suffered cuts on his forehead when his head struck the windshield, the sheriff said.

A friend, Maurice Goldblatt, art director of the University of Notre Dame galleries, walked into Stanton's office, spotted the painting and identified it as probably the work of John Trumbull and worth possible $50,000 or more.

Dr. Goldblatt described it as superior to Trumbull's Alexander Hamilton for which the late Andrew Mellon paid $100,000. ## Mayor Asks Citizens To Aid In Campaign To Prevent Inflation

Mayor Ben. H. Gordon Monday issued a proclamation calling on all citizens and merchants of Cincinnati to help avoid inflation by cooperating in the grocer-consumer anti-inflation campaign.

A community service committee was organized last week with Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker as chairman. This group will work with the War Price and Rationing Board in a campaign to promote observance of price ceilings in this vicinity.

Mayor Gordon's proclamation states:

Whereas the price ceilings are essential to the wartime welfare of the citizens of Cincinnati and of the merchants who serve them,

Whereas, as during the first World War, military victories will not immediately remove the dangers of disastrous inflation, and

Whereas, for some time to come we will face inflationary dangers that could rapidly destroy from within the very security our Armed Forces are fighting to protect,

Therefore, I, Ben H. Gordon, Mayor of Cincinnati, invoke each citizen to participate wholeheartedly in the Cincinnati grocer-consumer anti-inflation campaign by frank and friendly adherence to our ceiling price program.

Republican Chairman Herbert Brownell, who has been resting in Arizona, wants to resign, will call a national committee meeting shortly after the first of the year which promises to be turbulent. Several factions will be gunning for Dewey, may try to seize control of the party machinery, set the stage for "Stassen in '48."

One key man in the post-election GOP set-up is shrewd, popular publicist Lee Chesley, who joined the campaign late, is now in charge of national committee publicity. Chesley, one of the brightest press agents on the Washington scene, is anxious to slug it out toe to toe with Democratic publicist Paul Porter. Chesley's Washington predecessor, Carlisle Barger, handled publicity for the powerful Pennsylvania GOP machine during the campaign, and plans to continue working for Boss Joe Pew now that the balloting is over.

EAGLES COP PRO TITLE IN EAST; PACKERS BEATEN

By International News Service. The Philadelphia Eagles who have been threatening right along to take the Eastern division championship in the National Football League were alone at the top of the heap today in their division after administering a crushing 37 to 7 defeat to the Washington Redskins.

While the Eagles were doing this to the Redskins before 35,540 fans at Griffith stadium in Washington, the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds in New York, packed with a record crowd of 56,481, were upsetting the Green Bay Packers, 24 to 0.

The Packers, although soundly whipped, nevertheless backed into the Western division championship since the Chicago Bears, their rivals before Sunday's games, were taking an unexpected 41 to 21 shellacking at the hands of the Detroit Lions before a whooping crowd of 21,960 in Detroit. This put the Bears and Lions in a second place tie with four wins, three lost and one tied, and with neither having a chance to overtake the Packers who have won seven and lost two. The Chicago Card-Pitts lost their eighth straight game at Comiskey park, the Cleveland Rams being the victors this time, 33 to 6. Only 3,500 loyal fans turned out.

WAR PROGRESS

IN a big, complex war like the one in Europe it is well never to expect too much, no matter how well the situation looks. Even the experts have often been fooled.

It may be that the offensive on the western front is the real thing. It will be grand to watch it from day to day, if Hitler's western line is ripped open and the great Allied army is able to drive powerfully toward Berlin. That is what tens of millions of people have been hoping and waiting for. There is a fair chance, experts have said, of doing this and ending the war this year.

It is fine to think hopeful thoughts, but not to get mentally drunk with our own optimism. There may still be many a slip and set-back. The essential thing is to keep going relentlessly in spite of them, till the job is done. If we can round up the Hitler gang this year, great! If it takes additional months, we can stand it.

The Pacific war is much harder to estimate.

POETS AND REALISTS

NOT all the bravery is on the war front. Russell Davenport, formerly managing editor of "Fortune" and in 1940 Wendell Willkie's personal representative, has dared to issue a volume of poetry. This is a long poem, "My Country," which seeks to express the spirit of America, its sights, flowers and smells, its origins and destiny.

A good many people have contempt, if not for poetry, at least for poets. They are commonly thought of as long-haired eccentrics, unworthy of consideration by practical men. This view is of course unjust. Poetry has been admired and written by a great many practical persons. One of the best of American poets a generation ago, even if he did not attain the first rank, was Edmund Clarence Stedman, a New York banker associated both in business and friendship with the elder J. P. Morgan.

Good poetry demands vision. In these war-racked days vision is what the world needs most.

The girl on the bus was overheard to say, "What is the matter with this Mr. Oaks, that they always speak of him as Dumb Barton Oaks?"

WASHINGTON Report

Women's Counsel Needed
In Working Out Peace

Columnist Can't Agree
With Feminist Attitude

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—"Don't keep remembering you're 'women'! Just be 'people'!"

This used to be the battle cry of the feminists. I always thought it a thoroughly silly cry. For when did men stop thinking they were "men" and become just "people"?

The answer is "Never!" But we won't go into that subject here today. It is of women who have not forgotten to be women and have let "being people" take care of its own problem that I am about to speak.

The consensus of opinion among the Washington women to whom I have talked after election was relief that the suspense of waiting for Nov. 7 to decide who was to run most of the world was over. Now they could go about their normal affairs of "being women" and not trying to be "people." And what a pleasant change!

"Thank heaven I don't have to run the world or get any closer to its machinery than lying on the bed in the afternoon and telling somebody who also has a half hour to waste, what I think—over the phone—about the awful mistakes Roosevelt has made," said one frank female.

Another declared, "What I want to think about now is whether or not the cold pack permanent wave is better than the other kind." And another said, "I've worried about the war and the election and the war and the election until I developed violent indignation. I can only pray for the end of the war. Help with war work the best I can."

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

IMPROVED GERMAN STRATEGY

WASHINGTON—Allied Intelligence has done its best to solve the mystery of what has happened to Hitler, but his fate and whereabouts remain one of the most carefully kept secrets of the Reich.

Here are the only reliable facts that have been pieced together. It has been established that Hitler did go to Vienna for a throat operation about two months ago. He suffers from a chronic throat ailment, somewhat like Secretary Hull's and he has had several of these operations.

Prior to this Vienna operation, it was known that Hitler had become more and more domineering, more unbalanced, more inclined to shout down anyone who tried to talk to him. He was always inclined to be this way, but word leaked out to neutral countries is that he was more so this past summer.

The supposition is, therefore, that Hitler has been quietly put away by Himmler and the party leaders, probably confined to a sanitarium.

It has been noticeable to Allied military men for some time that Hitler was not at the helm. German military operations have been too well directed. There have been no eccentric moves such as when Hitler was muddling up the command.

It is not believed that Hitler was seriously injured by last July's attempted assassination. The hand grenade which exploded was in a briefcase in the middle of the room, while Hitler was at one side. Only a splinter of shrapnel is reported to have entered his hand.

As far as more skilful military operations are concerned, Hitler's absence will help the Nazis. Otherwise, it will be a more serious blow to Germany than most people here realize, for the lower ranks of the German Army worshipped Hitler. Prisoners interviewed after capture have indicated that they were fighting for Hitler, not so much for Germany.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Commuters between Washington and Baltimore the other day may have wondered why their train stopped just west of Laurel until two other trains whizzed past. Reason: The safety of the President. . . . Railroads stop all trains traveling in the opposite direction from the President's Special until he has passed. A two-car pilot train also goes just ahead of the President's Special to crash any explosives which may have been planted on the tracks. . . . Congressman-elect Bill Gallagher, one-time Minneapolis street cleaner, is being advised that he may find the implements of his former profession useful, at times, in the halls of Congress. . . . After Texas' unpopular Senator "Pappy" O'Daniel was drowned out with boos at Houston so that he couldn't speak, extreme precautions were taken at Dallas. Admission to the first dozen rows of the auditorium was by invitation only. . . . The tremendous advertising space used by Senator Nye in the North Dakota newspapers during his campaign indicates how decisively North Dakotans feel about isolation. Plenty of money came in from outsiders to help re-elect Nye, but money couldn't do it.

The Tuberculosis Campaign

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.
THE CHRISTMAS seals of the National Tuberculosis Association will soon be on sale. We realize that there are many appeals, especially this year, to give, but the seals do not cost much. If every family would buy a dollar's worth to put on the Christmas mail the amount expected to be raised would be realized.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The money really accomplishes something. We are winning the campaign against tuberculosis just as we are winning so many of our campaigns. Victory is, of course, far from complete. There still die every year in the United States from tuberculosis what would represent the population of a fair-sized town of about sixty thousand people. This is a loss by a preventable disease—a pure loss, the kind that needn't occur. But it is much less than it used to be.

Perhaps as graphic a way to show the improvement as any is to compare the amount of money disbursed by a large insurance company like the Metropolitan in death claims. In 1931, the disbursements of the company for deaths from tuberculosis was 7.3 per cent of the total disbursements; in 1941 it was 4.1 per cent. I cannot find in my files the figures for later years, but have no doubt the improvement is still going on.

Other Diseases

In that same period the disbursements for cancer rose from 10 per cent in 1931 to 14 per cent in 1941, and for heart disease from 15 per cent in 1931 to 18 per cent in 1941, showing that we have far less control over these latter chronic diseases than we do over tuberculosis.

What causes can be ascribed for the improvement in the tuberculosis death rate and incidence? Is it a natural phenomenon or did we plan it that way?

Well, partly it must be admitted that it is a natural phenomenon. Tuberculosis is a disease of poverty, of overcrowded living conditions and of poor food and bad nutrition. And undoubtedly in North America these conditions have greatly improved. Social reforms have to a certain extent done away with slums. Our housing conditions are better than they were 50 years ago. And in spite of the walls of the experts about how many million Americans are not eating the proper diet, food seems to be pretty well distributed and everybody is getting a fair share. The tendency to a more outdoor life and exposure to sunshine also helps keep down tuberculosis.

Planned Campaign

But undoubtedly the deliberately planned campaign against tuberculosis has done its share. For one thing it is educational. It is no longer considered a disgrace to have tuberculosis. The early symptoms are not disguised with fancy names that are only masks, such as—"she has gone into a kind of decline," or, "winter cough." More cases are detected earlier, are removed so that they do not contaminate others in the household, and treated at a period in the disease when they can be cured.

Two other plans can be specifically mentioned. One was the elimination of tuberculosis cattle. Thirty, even twenty, years ago the nature of a great deal of human tuberculosis in this country was bovine, from infected milk. The Department of Agriculture rigorously demanded the slaughter of all animals which reacted at all suspiciously to the tuberculin test.

Second, the educational program initiated in 1928 has undoubtedly brought many early cases to treatment. The poster for that year read—"You may have tuberculosis: let your doctor decide. Watch for these danger signs: too easily tired; loss of weight; indigestion; cough that hangs on." That is still good advice.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

I went back to Craig's room. Alexia was sitting in a kind of sulky silence beside the bed, and Craig was lying there looking straight ahead; neither of them spoke when I came in, although Alexia's eyes shifted toward me. And after a while she got up and walked out of the room. As she went Bevens came to the door; his color was a pale blue-gray, but he said punctiliously enough: "The police are in the north meadow, sir; I thought you had better be informed of their arrival."

But it was at least two hours before they came to Craig's room and brought the things they brought. It was a queer two hours which I remember in patches. Mostly we waited. Craig said nothing to me of Drue or of Alexia. Naturally, I said nothing of it to him and made the few remarks I had to make as short and crisp as I could make them.

Peter Huber brought Maud Chivery back to the house. Alexia helped her to bed and later I gave her a sedative. Maud said almost nothing; yet she seemed to know everything we did, her eyes were so bright and knowing. It may have been shock or brandy or sedative or all three—whatever it was, she went to bed docilely enough, and then all at once to sleep. Alexia stayed with her for a while and Nicky took her place.

Every so often someone would bring a bulletin from the police in the north meadow and once Peter, Nicky, and Bevens went down into the meadow until they encountered a policeman who sent them back.

A trooper again was outside Drue's door, and when I attempted to enter my own room and then go to Drue, he stopped me. "Orders, Miss," he said. And when I said, "Orders nothing; it's my room," he removed my hand from the door-knob in a very muscular way.

Bevens gave us a kind of dinner, served from the buffet in the big elaborate dining room. Anna didn't help him serve; she was having hysterics in her room and I sent her some spirits of ammonia.

But before dinner Peter Huber came to Craig's room; I was there and remained so I heard everything they said. Peter told him of the inquest and of our visit to Ballfold where we found Maud Chivery. "I'm horribly sorry, Miss Keate," he said. "It must have been a terrible shock finding him like that. I ought to have taken you to the house. Craig, what's your idea of this? Why do you think Dr. Chivery was murdered?"

I thought Craig hesitated before saying, "It's hard to say; Craig was very secretive. Pete, what about these checks to Nicky? It does look like blackmail, but there was nothing anybody could blackmail my father about. Nothing?"

Peter shrugged. "The police found the canceled checks."

Craig remarked suddenly, "I knew about the will, of course; Maud inherits now from Craig."

I remembered Maud sitting quietly in the bar, drinking steadily.

And an ugly picture presented itself in my mind: Maud in her dark cloak waiting for Craig in the meadow—and then afterward walking in to Ballfold, trying to establish a kind of fumbling alibi, and drinking because she had to, to steady herself for the discovery. She had told me to take the short cut which was the path through the meadow and led inevitably to the discovery of the murder. Was that to give herself another alibi?

And what of the time? Craig had left the inquest fifteen minutes before it adjourned, which would have given him just about enough time to reach the meadow. So what of Maud? How long actually had she been in the bar? And how long had Chivery been dead?

Craig and Peter were probably thinking very much the same thoughts for, after a longish silence, Peter declared, "I don't think she did it. A woman—"

Nicky came in just then to say there was a dinner of sorts in the dining room. A little to my surprise, Craig tackled him then and there about the checks.

"What were those checks for, Nicky?" he asked. "It couldn't have been an allowance. My father wouldn't have given you or me or anybody an allowance."

Nicky answered instantly, smiling. "He would have, if Alexia asked him to. As she did for me."

A slow flush came up into Craig's face, but his voice was quite level. "Do you know Frederic Miller?"

This time Nicky didn't answer promptly; he seemed to think, cautiously. Then he said, "No. What about him? Are there canceled checks to him, too?"

But Craig shook his head and made us all go to dinner. Gertrude, the little waitress, peeped with excitement, stayed with Craig while I ate hurriedly with the others.

I was alone with Craig when the police finally came. Lieutenant Nugent asked me to bring a towel from the bathroom. When I spread it out on the foot of the bed so Craig could see, they put down upon it two ugly objects.

One was a small kitchen paring knife with its blade sharpened razor-thin; it was spotted, especially about the wooden handle, with a dark, dried substance, now turning brown. The other was a yellow string glove; it, too, was stained in thick reddish brown patches, dry now and stiff.

Both had been found near Dr. Chivery's body, but not near enough for him to have used. So it did not indicate suicide.

And there were no other clues, except my own white cap and some nickels, which they returned a little ceremoniously to me, Peter having explained them.

The police requested me to stay, for they wanted to question me, and thus I heard the whole thing. Beyond the fact that they had found no one yet who had seen Craig Chivery after he left the inquest, I knew no more than I had already known.

They asked me about the rustle she probably intends it as a Dutch treat affair, and you should go prepared to pay your own bill. If she says, "I would like to take you to lunch on such and such a date," she pays for both.

If this is your birthday, you have positive opinions, but are not argumentative. You keep your own counsel and never violate a confidence. You are trustworthy and reliable, and have much latent ability. Your friends are only those who have interests similar to your own. You should marry early in life. Varied experiences

I had heard in the brush and my gruesome discovery.

Mainly they asked Craig about Dr. Chivery. Nugent asked, "Did the Doctor know anything about your father's death?"

"Craig didn't tell everything, he knew," remarked Craig obliquely. Nugent's green eyes sharpened. "Why do you think he was killed, Brent?"

"I don't know. But I'd stick to the knife if I were you—for a clue. The glove . . ."

"Oh, nothing. It doesn't seem to mean anything."

"You're not being very frank, Brent."

"I can't do much to help you when I'm in bed."

Nugent said slowly, "I'd better tell you that it would help if you had an alibi for this afternoon."

"I?" Craig lifted himself abruptly on his elbow, winced and lay cautiously back again.

"An alibi always helps," declared Nugent. "But the fact is people are saying now that you and Mrs. Brent inherit practically all of your father's money. And everyone knows that you and Mrs. Brent . . ."

A slow flush was creeping up over Craig's face; his eyes narrowed. "Will you say it?"

"You know as well as I do what I mean," said Nugent. "Everyone thought you and Mrs. Brent were to be married over a year ago; then you married the nurse and Alexia. Senour married your father. Now they're saying . . ."

"Listen! I didn't kill my father! Get that into your head! I didn't kill Craig either," said Craig bleakly. "I've no alibi for this afternoon, unless you consider it an alibi not to be able to walk without getting dizzy."

Nugent leaned forward. "Are you sure of that, Brent?"

"What! Do you think I'd stay here if I could help it?" he cried angrily. "Don't you think I'd get out and do something!"

"What would you do?" broke in Nugent softly.

Craig stopped abruptly. "I don't know," he said wearily, after a moment.

I said, merely in the line of duty and not to defend Craig, "He couldn't have murdered Dr. Chivery. Dr. Chivery has been walked that far and back. I'm sure of that, Lieutenant."

Nugent's gray-green gaze plunged at me. "Are you sure, Miss Keate?"

"Yes. And as to that, Mr. Brent had an alibi the night his father died. I was with him."

"I know," said Nugent without any expression at all in his face. "Still, sick people have been known to walk incredible distances. And there really is no alibi in the case of murder by poison."

Craig made a quick motion forward as if to expostulate, and I said hurriedly, "I can't let you question my patient very long, Lieutenant. And put my hand on Craig's wrist."

STARS SAY—

For Monday, November 20

Monday's astrological forecast is for a particularly lively day, with affairs moving under high tension in the direction of attaining most cherished and ambitious objectives. It should be a time to push for such goals with might and main, since there is the assurance of help and substantial tokens of preferment from "higher ups." Even against trickery and subtle underminings such friendships may be counted upon. Seek prestige and popularity.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of fulfillment of their dearest objectives if they will forge ahead to such goals, since all reasonable efforts and ambitions will be enhanced by the favors and substantial assistance of influential personages. Work for recognition, with increased credit, and personal prestige and popularity. This may also bear rich fruit in all domestic, social and sentimental relations.

A child born on this day may be fortunate in attracting the support and preferment of those in high places, ready to assist to success and personal prestige and happiness.

SOMETIMES IT HURTS

SOMETIMES losing the lead to your opponents cannot harm you at all, sometimes it actually helps you, but also there are times when it can hurt. From a declarer's standpoint, that is most poignantly true when the opponents have established a suit, which they can run for a number of tricks, since he has no way to stop it. In No Trump play that could occur if he had no stopper at all in the suit or if his stoppers had been used up. In suit play it could happen after his trumps are gone.

South ruffed the third diamond lead, then used his four heart honors to remove the trumps of his opponents, even though that used up all of his own, too. He had reckoned on a quick size-up that if the club finesse would work, he could score 10 tricks with hearts and clubs alone, so he then took the club K and finessed the J. East won with the Q and returned the spade 2 to the A, whereupon

West cashed two more diamonds, setting him three tricks.

At another table of the same duplicate, South got into the same contact by slightly different bidding, and played the hand very differently. He, too, ruffed the third diamond lead, but he did it with the heart A, then led his 7 to the 10 and brought forth the spade 10 from the dummy. When East refused to cover, he played the 4, and West won with the A. A diamond return now could not hurt South, as it could be ruffed with the dummy's 9. So West returned his heart 3.

South was now o.k. He took that heart in his own hand, dropped West's other two hearts with his own last two, scored the club K and A and led the spade 9. When East played low again, South underplayed with the 8, then finessed the spade J and took the game trick with the spade K. He was home because he gave the defenders the lead at a time he could afford to do so.

OHIO STATE IS ONLY UNBEATEN BUCKEYE ELEVEN

By International News Service

The job of giving the Buckeye state at least one unbeaten untied college football team fell to Coach Carroll C. Widows and his Ohio state eleven today after Miami University fell from the undefeated ranks in its final game of the season Saturday.

Miami, with eight straight victories tucked away, relinquished its perfect record in a 13-7 loss to DePauw, Miami decided the same team earlier in the season by a 12-0 count but that was before all of Coach Sid Gillman's Navy men passed on their naval training stations.

Ohio State managed rather decisively to remain in the select list for another week after drubbing Buddy Young and the University of Illinois, 26-12, before the season's largest grid outpouring of the season—83,627 fans.

But the Buckeyes' big test is coming this week when mighty Michigan's once-beaten Wolverines march into Ohio stadium for a Saturday game in which the 1944 Western Conference and a possible trip to the Rose Bowl hinges.

Aside from the Miami debacle and Ohio State's decisive victory over Illinois, the week's biggest news was provided by Otterbein and Oberlin. Otterbein clinched the Ohio conference's "civilian" champion in walloping Capital,

MYTHICAL GRID TITLE CONCEDED TO CLEVELAND 11

COLUMBUS, Nov. 20.—Mighty Cleveland Cathedral Latin was within a stone's throw of the 1944 mythical Ohio high school football championship today as the season turned into the home stretch.

Latin, in an International News Service poll determining the state's 10 leading schoolboy eleven, continued in the No. 1 spot for the eighth straight week in trouncing Cleveland East Tech, 19-7. That victory sent the Lions into the annual charity football classic against Lincoln High in Municipal Stadium before the season's largest high school crowd — approximately 60,000.

Many veteran scholastic football followers saw in Latin's latest triumph a clear-cut Ohio championship. The Lions' No. 1 challenger for the crown is once-beaten Canton McKinley, which ended its season Saturday with a 27-0 decision over Massillon in the golden anniversary of that traditional Stark county rivalry.

McKinley's lone loss was a 27-26 beating inflicted by an unpredictable Warren outfit. After crushing McKinley's hopes for a perfect season, Warren went on to a sorry 13-7 loss at the hands of Cleveland East Tech. Those whose pastime is comparative scores find much solace for Latin in these comparisons.

In the matter of the mythical grid crown, unbeaten Columbus North, Toledo Libbey and New Philadelphia, among others, can't be completely overlooked. North closed its season with a record of nine straight victories by edging once-beaten, once-tied Columbus West, Toledo Libbey, idle last week, closes its season this week against DeVillibus of Toledo, and New Philadelphia, with a crucial date with Dover ahead, breezed through Canton Tinken, 28-13.

These were the only teams among Ohio's 10 best in action this week. Five of the teams—Lakewood, Warren, Middletown, Cleveland Shaw and Coshocton—previously closed their seasons.

The INS poll ranked the 10 top teams in this order: Cathedral Latin 9-0; Canton McKinley, 9-1; Columbus North, 9-0; Lakewood, 8-1; Warren, 7-1; Toledo Libbey, 8-0; New Philadelphia, 9-0; Middletown, 8-0; Cleveland Shaw, 8-1; Coshocton, 8-0.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

EPHRAIM ARMY AIR BASE. Wash.—Shakespeare, author of the crack, "What's in a name?" should have said to stammer this one: Comondouros Themistocles. At least, so say the roster recorder, who has to type the sergeant's name, and the roll-call officer, who has to pronounce it.

BUCKS PREP FOR TOUGHEST GAME

Ohio Boys Forget 26-12 Win Over Illini; Concentrate On Michigan Tilt

COLUMBUS, Nov. 20.—With the 1944 Western Conference football championship and a possible trip to the Rose Bowl hanging in the balance, Ohio State's undefeated, untied, incomparable Buckeyes focused their full attention on once-beaten Michigan today in the wake of a 26-12 victory over Buddy Young and Illinois in Cleveland Saturday.

Nobody in the Ohio State camp—from Head Coach Carroll C. Widdoes to the water boy—fooled themselves by believing that Michigan was a cinch to become the Bucks' ninth straight victim.

The Bucks returned to Columbus Sunday afternoon and almost immediately preparations began to take form for the crucial date in Ohio stadium Saturday with the Wolverines. The Bucks' board of strategy went into a huddle with Assistant Coach Ernie Godfrey to hear scouting reports on the three games in which he has watched Michigan ride to victory.

Widdoes said his Buckeyes wouldn't get a single day of rest this week with workouts even scheduled Thursday, Thanksgiving Day.

Ohio State rates as the pre-game favorite, but Michigan stacks up as a great challenger. It's a tossup from most angles and a break one way or another might be the deciding factor.

But regardless of next Saturday's results, the Ohio victory over Illinois in Cleveland Saturday will be a never-to-forget item in the minds of 83,627 fans who jammed in the lake-front stadium. It was the year's biggest gridiron gathering and the largest paid sports outpouring in all Cleveland history.

Ohio spotted the Illini a first period touchdown but smashed ahead to a decisive 26-12 victory before the game closed. And, as usual, it was Quarterback Les Horvath in the starring role for the Buckeyes. He scored two touchdowns and passed and ran for many more yards as the Bucks shadowed the nation's fastest backfield—Buddy Young et al.

The Illini kicked off to Ohio's Dick Flanagan, who got back as far as his own 25. The stocky Sidner halfback smashed through center on the next play, but fumbled with Ralph Serpico recovering for Illinois on the Ohio 37. Young picked up two yards through the line and Don Greenwood masterfully stepped off 35 yards for the touchdown. Big Bill Willis partially blocked Greenwood's try for the extra point.

The Buckeyes made it clear this was only an oversight. In five minutes

Intensive War Bond Campaign To Open In County Friday

LEADERS HOPE TO REACH GOAL WITHIN WEEK

All Homes To Be Visited By Big Corps Of Local Solicitors

An intensive drive to put Circleville and Pickaway county over the top in the Sixth War Loan drive will start Friday, the day after Thanksgiving, County Chairman Clark Will announced Monday.

While the national drive opened Monday, the local committee has decided to start the campaign here Friday and finish it by December 1, Mr. Will announced.

As in previous drives house-to-house solicitation will be used. Every home in the city and county will be visited by solicitors during the period from November 24 to December 1.

Total quota for Pickaway county is $1,256,000 and $520,000 of the amount is to be raised from individual purchase of Series E bonds and other issues. The corporation and organization quota is $766,000. In past drives the county has failed to meet its quota of Series E bonds and this time a special effort will be made to meet and exceed the quota, Mr. Will said.

One way to boost the county E bond standings is for Pickaway county residents who work outside of the county to purchase bonds in the county, Mr. Will said.

It is estimated that between 800 and 900 Pickaway county residents are employed outside the county. Most of them are buying bonds and Pickaway county should have the credit, Mr. Will said. Many of the plants in the cities have plant quotas and insist on purchases through these channels. The Pickaway county committee urges that in making their bond purchases residents of the county insist the sales be allocated to Pickaway county. This procedure will increase total county sales and make a better showing in the ration to population.
